In the Dunes

By HONORE WILLSIE

Copyright, 1905, by Honore Willsie

Lake Michigan is covetous of her eastern shore. Year after year her sands creep inland. Inch by inch, mile by mile, now a peach orchard is smothered, now a mellow wheatfield is blotted out, and in their stead scrub pines thrive and sand burs sprawl in the sun. Year by year the scrub pines grow stouter and the sand burs tangle thicker and thicker, and with each year the desolation of the sand dune country increases. Roads formed one month are shifting dunes the next. Inland lakes, once green and lively, slowly and mercilessly are choked until only sand skirted pools remain. And still the desolation grows.

Katherine and her Great Dane huddled together under the scrub pine and watched the gray of the twilight turn to purple.

"Well, we're lost, Jacky," she said, "just plain lost! The hunting lodge ought to be over in that direction, but it's not, and they have supper so late they won't miss us for another hour. How would it seem to spend the night in the sand hurs, do you suppose, Jacky?"

Jacky whined and laid his great head in the girl's lap. She rubbed his ears absentmindedly and started off over the dunes. "I'm not frightened," she said. "I'm just—just lonely. Well, let's empty our shoes, Jacky, and start on."

The low shoes once more securely tied, Katherine picked up the bit of fish rod with which as a staff she had strolled from camp early in the afternoon and struggled to the top of the dune, the dog trudging beside her, with now and again a growl at the shadowy pines. From the top of this heap of sand she saw another heap looming through the dusk. Down she waded, now leaning on her bit of bamboo, now holding to Jacky's collar, until from the top of this she discovered a third bur crowned dune. On the top of the third dune she dropped down to rest, while the dog crouched on her skirts, with watchful ears pricked forward. Suddenly he gave a little yelp and ran into the dusk.

"Jacky!" called the girl. Then she struggled after him through the heavy sand.

"Why," she said, "it's another little lake! Look out, Jacky; don't drink too much. I'm not thirsty enough to drink water I can't see. Why, how soft this sand is! Jacky—it—why—I'm in way above my ankles!"

She floundered toward the dog as he turned toward her with a whine, the instinctive desire in danger of the living for the living.

"Oh, Jacky, it's one of the quicksand bars!"

Trembling and panting, the dog threw himself against her knees, while his whines changed to sharp yelps. In vain Katherine struggled to draw her feet from the sand. It had closed about each foot with the grip of giant hands that insistently, silently drew her down. She stooped and felt Jacky's back. Already the quivering sands were half way up his legs. As she felt of him his yelping ceased. He reached up and licked the face bending over him. Then he crouched low, while Katherine felt his great muscles swell and stiffen. Then suddenly he hurled himself forward with all the strength of his lean, magnificent body and in three leaps had disappeared into the dusk. Katherine gave a low sob.

"Oh, Jacky, how could you leave me?" Again, summoning all her strength, she strove to follow him. But the struggle was worse than useless. And now the calm that had possessed her left her. She stooped and scooped at the sand about her ankles with bare hands, digging frantically, with low moans not unlike Jacky's. Handful after handful, then a pause, while she stared out into the darkness with shrieks for help. The sand had crept above her knees. With broken nails she stopped to listen. Yes, far out across the dunes she heard a man's shout and Jacky's excited bark, and again she raised her own hoarse cry. Then she heard the crackle of sand burs.

"Katherine, for heaven's sake, where are you?" His voice!

"Go back, Hugh—go back! I'm in the quicksand!"

Silence from the shore, then: "Stay perfectly still. I'll be out there in a few minutes. I'm going to cut pine boughs to walk on."

In utter thankfulness Katherine stood silent. Then surprise swept over her. Hugh! That was Hugh, whom she had not seen or heard of for a year, not since she had tossed the ring—the wedding ring—back to him and said:

"Well, six months have shown us what a fuddle we have made of marriage. Let's have sense enough to stop now. We evidently don't care enough to give in to each other."

Without a word Hugh had taken the ring and left her. And now to be found this way, and by him! In silence she watched the path he made grow out toward her and in silence heard Jacky's excited greetings to her from the shore. Then, after what seemed a lifetime of battle with a creeping sand, the man lifted her in his arms and silently carried her to the shore. She lay quietly, while the dog fawned about her and the man, a broad shouldered figure in the summer darkness, brushed the sand from her skirts and emptied her sodden shoes.

"What am I to do with you, Katherine?" he asked.

"I got lost from camp," she answered. "I don't know. Show me the way back, and I'll go when I'm rested. I don't want that coward Jacky, though."

"I was driving out to Camp Minitka. I didn't know you were there. John asked me—to effect a reconciliation, I suppose. It is like him. Jacky was running about among the burs, whining. Then he saw me and literally dragged me out of the buckboard and down here. I shall drive you back to camp and then return to town."

The girl put her arm about the dog, and he snuggled down beside her with a deep sigh. "That will be best, I suppose," she said.

"I think I shall leave you here," Hugh went on, "while I go back for the horse. It must be three-quarters of a mile away." He pulled off his coat, wrapped it about Katherine's shoulders and strode off into the darkness.

Katherine lay in the warm sand close to Jacky, who watched her every movement. She was not at all afraid. It seemed to her that, after the wonder of her rescue, she never again could know fear. Little by little the stars grew brighter and the answering glow of the sand seemed like the half light of some strange new dawn. At first she lay without articulate thought, thankful to be alive, to feel the warmth of the sand and of the great dog beside her, to rest her strained muscles.

Then suddenly the past year, which had seemed to her so heroic, so sacrificial, seemed very useless and shallow.

"I must find some new thing to do," she thought. "Hugh has gone on in his work. I must find work for myself."

She moved closer to the dog and half unconsciously raised her head from the sand to listen for the crackle of sand burs under heavy boots. Then almost without warning Hugh stood beside her.

"Can you walk," he said, "or shall I carry you?"

"Oh, I can walk," she answered as he helped her to her feet. They walked in silence to the buckboard. Hugh untied the horse and, reins in hand, stood waiting to help her.

Katherine stared at the man. She seemed to have awakened from a dream. "And I've missed a whole year," she said. "And who am I to set myself in judgment of us both? Hugh," with a pitiful little inflection of humility in her voice that was as strange to her own ears—"Hugh, will you—shall we try again?"

For one moment he stared at the drooping head of the girl. "Dear!" he said after awhile, and, gathering her in his arms, he climbed into the buckboard, and, with Jacky following close behind, they drove slowly off into the summer night.

Fencing For Exercise.

The enormous value of continual practice with the foils as a means of securing and preserving good health is, in my humble opinion, the main reason for the steady hold of fencing upon public favor in France and Italy. It is only of late years that the attention bestowed by medical men upon physical exercise, in France at least, where Dr. Lagrange's treatises have become classical, has given prominence to the worth of fencing as a health factor. Every one knows, or, rather, every one should know, that fencing presses into service every muscle of the human frame, that it creates and develops suppleness and quickness, that practiced in youth it imparts a freedom and grace of motion absolutely unattainable by other means, that it is not a violent exercise in so far as injury by strain is involved and, finally, that its perils are comparatively few. At very remote intervals one hears of a fatal injury resulting, almost invariably from a cheap or damaged mask or from the foolhardy practice of exercising without the usual head or chest covering or with an ill buttoned foil. The proportion of mishaps to the number of fencers, however, is infinitesimal.—Frederick A. Schwab in Outing.

A Long Walk.

The dear old professor was one of the kindest hearted men in the world, but he was also one of the most absentminded. He was recently visiting his newly married nephew, and, naturally, the young wife was full of the praises of her firstborn. The professor listened like a man in a dream to her recital of the remarkable fortitude with which he cut his teeth and his truly wonderful intelligence. At last the dear old fellow woke up with a start and felt he really must say something for the sake of at any rate appearing interested. "Can the dear little fellow walk?" he inquired mildly. "Walk?" said the proud mother. "Why, he has been walking six months!" "Dear me!" said the professor, lapsing once more into abstraction. "What a long way he must have got!"

American Clubs All Wrong.

"American clubs are few and small," said a social philosopher, "because they exist on a radically wrong principle. This principle is that club life is an extravagance, whereas the right principle of club life is that it is an economy.

"London is the club city of the world. Why are London's clubs so splendid and so popular? Because a man can dine, drink, smoke and amuse himself in them almost as cheaply as in his own house—far and away more cheaply than in a cafe or a hotel.

"Hence in London every man desires to join a good club, for a London club is an institution that actually saves its members money. But here in America our clubs are conducted extravagantly, and it is an extravagance to belong to them. Only the very prosperous American can afford to be a clubman."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

Contrasted Types.

The outspoken romance of the German is sometimes trying to those of a different habit. The author of the traveling notes called "From a Holiday Journal" describes a young girl whom she met at a German bath, a pretty, doll-like creature, named Marie, who knew how to sit still and do nothing all day long.

Presently it was discovered that Marie had a lover. She disclosed the fact boldly.

"My brautigam is young, handsome, rich," she said proudly, looking up to a tall English girl of seventeen. "And have you not a bridegroom too? Or did you never have one?"

The English girl had never before felt the humiliation caused by the lack of a bridegroom. So she shamefacedly confessed that some one liked her, only this spring, but—

"But you do not love him," interrupted the German girl in loud but very bad English. "Oh, I love my treasure so! I love him so!"

The English girl shuddered and blushed to the roots of her hair. The words had been distinctly spoken and had evidently proved very amusing to a party of English in the vicinity.

"Oh," she implored, "would you mind saying 'like' instead of 'love' next time? We never say 'love' in English. We have no such thing!"

How She Died.

A minor poet who talked of his lady's person being "curiously mix'd" would not be enthusiastically reviewed nowadays. But so startlingly beautiful was the lady in question, one Susanna Perwich, who died of rheumatic fever at Hackney on July 3, 1661, "in the flower of her age," that these lines in praise of her have not only been preserved, but they have even escaped classification with nonsense verse. This explanation is, perhaps, necessary before quoting the inspired account of her death:

Behold, damp sheets
Cling close about her in the bed,
At which she, waking, said, "I'm dead!"
Shall I the careless maid go blame
And tell her what a horrid shame
It is that by her negligence
So choice a one is lost from hence?

—London Chronicle.

Dancing.

It is quite usual after a ball to find that the action of the heart shows traces of fatigue, particularly in delicate young women, who complain of a vague sensation of uneasiness, sadness and even of pain and are, in a word, in a peculiar condition that is not yet disease, nor is it health—much nearer the former than the latter. Diseases caused by dancing are commoner in women than in men. The most frequent are laryngitis, particularly in women who talk a great deal while dancing; colds, bronchitis and sometimes pneumonia and pleurisy. Dancing should be absolutely forbidden in all cases of consumption, which may assume a very rapid form from this cause. It is counter indicated as well in all cases of heart trouble.

Egyptian Styles of Writing.

The Egyptians had four separate and distinct styles or forms of writing—the hieroglyphic, the hieratic, the enchorial and the Coptic. The hieroglyphic was probably in use as early as the year 4000 B. C. and at first was made up entirely of pictures. About the year 2000 B. C. the hieratic form or style was introduced. In this the picture hieroglyphics were greatly simplified, finally developing into forms purely linear. The enchorial form of writing was in use among the Egyptians from about the year 700 B. C. until about the year 200 A. D. and was still a further simplification of the earlier forms, which finally developed into the alphabetic form known as the Coptic.

A rich man died the other day. He died in the very midsummer of life, and he left his family $1,000,000. The doctor's certificate showed that death resulted from typhoid fever. The doctor himself said to a friend: "That man was a suicide. He had a splendid constitution. I could have pulled him through if his stomach had been sound. But he ruined his stomach by hasty meals, snatched in intervals of business and by neglect of symptoms which have been warning him a year past, that his stomach was failing in its duties."

The symptoms of a disordered stomach are, among others, variable appetite, sour risings, heartburn, undue fullness after eating, dull headache, dingy complexion, discolored eye, fluctuations in physical strength, nervousness, sleeplessness dependency. No person will have all these symptoms at once.

The restoration of the stomach to sound health, begins with the first dose of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. The cure progresses until the functions of the stomach are in healthy operation. Then the nerves are quiet and strong, the appetite healthful, the sleep restful, the eye bright, the complexion clear.

"Please accept my thanks for the benefit which my child received from your medicine," writes Mrs. W. A. Morgan, of Shea, Me. "He had been troubled for nearly a year with liver complaint, indigestion and constipation. I gave him your 'Golden Medical Discovery' and 'Pleasant Pellets,' and they did him great good. I gave him the 'Discovery' about eight months, and several vials of the 'Pellets.' He seems to be perfectly well now."

If you want a cure accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery."

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets

These ORIGINAL Little Liver Pills, first put up by old Dr. R. V. Pierce over 40 years ago, have been much imitated but never equaled. They're made of purely vegetable, concentrated and refined medicinal principles, extracted from native American roots and plants. They speedily relieve and cure foul, torpid and deranged Stomachs, Livers and Bowels and their attendant distressful ailments. One or two a laxative, three or four a cathartic.

The Thorn of Experience

"Experience keeps a dear school, but fools will learn in no other."

How strange it is that so many people will persist in repeating follies, when they know the price they must pay, and yet the errors of yesterday are repeated invariably today and tomorrow, because it is usually experience that teaches. True it is that some profit by the experience of others, but the personal experience is the real disciplinarian. Experience as a teacher is not always effective, however, for just as some pupils will not be taught in the school-room, so some will never learn in life. Such are weaklings or perverts, who become, for instance, second and third termers in our prisons.

Those who do learn and profit by experience may have been fools in the beginning, but they are no longer so, once having learned. They may not be as strong as the men, who by nature, know right from wrong and good from bad, but they become reliable and useful members of society, and will not only seek to replace experience as a teacher, but will decry it.

We all know that forgery and theft are crimes and that they are punishable by imprisonment. The prisons loom up, menacing reminders of what awaits these malefactors, and the papers daily chronicle the fate of men who have trangressed the law, which must be obeyed. With all this example, however, men will forge and steal, but they who commit crime seldom, if ever, profit by their experience, for the experience gleaned in our modern penal institutions does not tend to reform.

The comparatively petty things in life, however, can be learned by experience, more or less bitter. Divorce is really the outcome of the failure of men and women to profit by example, and their blind determination to defy precedent. The young man knows the failure of marrying for money alone, yet he refuses to heed any warnings, and only learns by unhappiness. The young woman knows that it is the height of folly to marry a drunkard, yet history must be repeated in all its revolting phases to her before she realizes that others were right when they sought to warn her. It is to be hoped that every being is included in the scheme of evolution, and that some day no moth will have to have its wings singed 'ere it learns life's lessons. Then the world will have progressed, and we will be nearer a real maturity.

Another winter season is but a short way off, when tourists from all over the country will be coming to California. Sonoma is just as far away from securing her share of these tourists as she ever was, for there have been no successful efforts made to advertise our town and valley on the outside. It is the rich tourist home-seeker that we ought to attract, for Sonoma is the ideal place for homes. With dozens of other localities holding out inducements and invitations, however, we can not expect so be sought out. The localities that advertise and allure will get the people while we, in slang parlance, will be lost in the shuffle. Visitors to California must accidentally stumble on our advantages or they will never hear of them. They have no time to waste in exploration when the way is pointed out to many fair sections.

The Monterey Chamber of Commerce advertises Monterey very effectively so does the Ventura Board of Trade, Lompoc Valley Chamber of Commerce, Fresno County Chamber of Commerce, and Napa Chamber of Commerce All these advertise their advantages in a most attractive manner.

It would be the best work that could possibly be done in this valley for all organizations to work for an advertising fund. When we have the money and good judgment to make known our advantages through effective advertising Sonoma's future will be assured.

One of the problems Sonoma has on her hands is the improvement of the plaza. Everyone would like to see it beautified, but without the expenditure of much money it has always seemed impossible. It might be practicable, however, for some organization, say the Woman's Club, to offer a cash prize, or prizes to the individual, who in a certain length of time succeeds best in beautifying an allotted portion of ground with flowers, grass or trees. We might then get a good practical demonstration as to how to go about this, and if a way were pointed out much good would be accomplished. The competition might result in transforming our plaza into a pretty park, and though all individual effort might not result in prize winning, the workers would be public benefactors.

Making Rebates More Common.

The Esch-Townsend bill, that passed the House of Representatives at the last session of Congress, would seem to be a measure tending to make railroad rebates more common. Under its provisions the Interstate Commerce Commission is given power to establish join rates and regulations and practices affecting the transportation of property. An eminent authority on railroad matters says:

"Manifestly one of the most important regulations a carrier may make is to routing the traffic originating along its line and going to a connecting line. It is not unusual now for the carriers with whom traffic originates to excercise the right to specify the routing when it goes to connecting lines. That gives the carriers a very forcible method of preventing rebates by connections. They can say to a connecting line, 'If you violate the law and cut through rates we will quit routing by your line, and if necessary will withdraw from you.'

"Therefore it makes each railroad company which is endeavoring to obey the law a policeman to make its connections obey the law, but under the provisions of the Townsend bill the Commission would have the right to prevent railroads from routing traffic. It has always been the attitude of the Commission that routing ought to be left to the shipper and the Commission would undoubtedly so provide if it had the power, as it would have had under the Townsend bill. So under that bill a connecting line could make arrangements with the shippers to cut rates contrary to the will of the initial carrier which quotes the rate and ought to be able to control it. In other words that would have been a very marked source of additional abuses and departures from published rates."

"The little black man" of hypnotic influence, whom a bridegroom claimed was the cause of his failing to show up on his wedding day was probably nothing but a little white lie.

The man who went to the barber's and never came back may not be dead, but he probably had a close shave.

When a fellow steals a pair of suspenders the crime somehow savors of a hold-up.

NICHELINI WINS IN SUPREME COURT

Judge Burnett Gave Him $500 Cash and Now He Secures the $1,000 Note

Some years ago Florenzo Nichelini entered into an agreement with an aged man named Leopoldo Maionchi to provide and take care of him for the balance of his life. For this service he was to inherit on the death of the old man the sum of $500, while his mother, Mrs. Nichelini, was to receive the sum of $1,000. This $1,500 represented the entire savings of Maionchi, which he had been years in accumulating.

After the agreement had been made and duly witnessed before a Notary Public, Nichelini entered into the agreement in good faith and for a year or more Maionchi was comfortably domiciled on the Nichelini ranch near Agua Caliente, and of the old man's money, $500 was allowed to remain in the Sonoma Valley Bank and $1,000 was loaned to J. Chauvet of Glen Ellen at a goodly rate of interest.

Later on a complaint was sworn to by parties in this place charging Maionchi with insanity. The papers were put into the hands of an officer, who went to the Nichelini ranch, arrested the old man and took him before an insanity commission in Santa Rosa and he was committed to Napa the very next day, where he has since been in confinement.

Maionchi, having been declared insane, proceedings were then instituted against Nichelini to break the agreement entered into between him and the old man, and to force him to turn over to a special administrator appointed by the Court, the $1,500 belonging to him.

When the trial of the cause came on before Judge Burnett he awarded Nichelini the $500 deposit in the Sonoma Valley Bank, while the $1,000 note was to go to the administrator of the Maionchi estate.

Nichelini then took an appeal to the Supreme Court, which tribunal decided last week in his favor.

Summed up the $1,500 belonging to the old man goes to the Nichelinis, who have ever stood ready to keep their agreement.

It is now hoped for poor old Maionchi's sake that he will eventually be discharged from the Napa Asylum, in which case the Nichelinis will no doubt provide a home for him for the balance of his days.

Wants to be Administrator

E. M. Hoen has filed a petition with the Superior Court to be appointed administrator of the estate of Levice Carriger, who passed away in 1866, leaving some real property in this county. The next of kin are Levisa C. Lewis of El Verano, Evelyn Tufts of Virginia City, Nevada; Elizabeth Schetter of Elmhurst, Eliza Powell of San Francisco, Mrs. Emma Carriger of Auburn, Kansas; David W. Carriger of Red Rock, Arizona; Albert Boggs Carriger of Trinity County, and Soloman Carriger of Sonoma. Attorneys Albert M. and Hiram W. Johnson represent the petitioner.

Peter Keil Sues for Divorce

Peter G. Keil filed a divorce Saturday in Santa Rosa through his attorney, F. T. Duhring, against Carrie Genevieve Keil, whom he married in San Francisco a couple of years ago.

The proceedings came as a surprise to Keil's many friends, who did not know that he was married, as his wife never lived here. The grounds of divorce are desertion.

BOARD OF HEALTH SHOULD BE ACTIVE

Sanitary Conditions in Sonoma Ought to be Under Constant Surveillance.

With no sewer system and no active Board of Health Sonoma is inviting contagion and trusting to individuals to regulate sanitary conditions in the community. As a result many nuisances are being committed and tolerated in our midst. That we have been so fortunate in the past is no reason why we should in the future. Some argue that this is a healthy community but it might be still more healthful and require less doctors if it were not for open ditches and foul cesspools. The longer the town has a Board of Health that does not act the worse its condition will be, for people will become more careless when they discover that they are not under the surveillance of health officers or subject to the inspection of an authorized health body of any kind.

Sonoma should have an active Board of Health composed for the most part of physicians, which should inspect conditions and report any violation of the law. It should be empowered to enforce sanitary conditions.

Business interests and policy, too, frequently prevent country Boards of Health from doing their duty by the community. The open ditch nuisance exists in this town from one summer to another and visitors cannot understand why something is not done to abate it.

This matter is one of the things Sonoma should take up if she wishes to preserve the health of the town and impress people with her progressiveness.

Good Baseball

The baseball game on Sunday last between the Sonoma Nine and the Oak Runs of San Francisco was a good one and was attended by an enthusiastic crowd.

In the first few innings the Sonoma boys had everything their own way, but the Oak Runs finally woke up, and after the eighth inning the score stood ten to nine in favor of the Frisco team. Owing to the time of day the ninth inning was omitted.

Congregational Church

To-morrow (Sunday) at the Congregational Church at 10 A. M. there will be special services for "Rally Sunday" in the Sunday school room. At 11 A. M. Woman's Club Held Meeting

The Sonoma Valley Woman's Club held its regular October meeting at the club rooms on Spain street last Friday, and many members were in attendance. The postponement of Landmarks Day until the return of Jack London was requested and granted. The anniversary reception was canceled. On Friday afternoon, the 20th inst. Miss Minnie Cook, chairman of the Forestry Section, will have charge of the program, and it was decided to extend an invitation to the ladies of the Glen Ellen Improvement Club to be present on that day. Also, to Mrs. Gorham of Vallejo. A concert for the benefit of the library was also decided upon.

No reply having been received to the communication addressed to the City Fathers in regard to the four dollars due on the fountain, the secretary was ordered to request the board to report the disposition of the matter. After February next all heads of sections will be elected instead of appointed.

At the next meeting the club will take up the matter of getting out official picture postal cards with a photograph of the fountain thereon, and disposing of them for the benefit of the fountain fund. Prices and samples will be submitted on the 20th of this month.

Resolutions of respect were drawn up by a committee of three and ordered forwarded to the family of the late Mrs. G. S. Harris.

Jewish Sabbath and the Romans.

The disdain of the Romans for the Jewish Sabbath because it was not accompanied by any tumult or noisy and joyful demonstrations perpetuated itself throughout all ages. Rutelius, who was the prefect of Rome under Honorium, says in speaking of the Jews: "They are very much attached to the cold Sabbath, but their heart is colder than their religion. The seventh day of every week is consecrated to a shameful idleness, in memory of the rest to which their God gave himself up after he was harassed by fatigue."

Juvenal does not love the Sabbath, which, according to him, is also a sad feast, for he relates that the kings of Palestine celebrate that day barefooted. Juvenal meant perhaps to designate here by "festa Sabbata" the day of Atonement and the fast of the ninth of Ab—anniversary of the destruction of the temple at Jerusalem. During these two days the Jews remained in fact barefooted.

Juvenal has no great affection for the Jews. He has an aversion for those who observe the Sabbath, that live isolated and who do not mingle with the Romans. He dislikes them because they have a peculiar religion and special laws, and he reproaches them for despising the Roman laws.—Menora.

The Hindoo Strong Man.

The Hindoos tell wonderful stories of the feats of Bhima, who was their strong man. Among the wonders credited to Bhima are the following: Pursued by a tiger, his mother when nursing Bhima let him drop. The force of the impact shattered in a thousand pieces the rock on which he had fallen, but the boy was none the worse. When he quarreled with other boys he gathered them up, ten or fifteen at a time, and plumped them into the nearest pond. His cousins hid themselves in a tall banyan to jeer at him, but he tore it from the ground without effort. He snapped his bonds like Samson, and a hungry cobra's fangs could not penetrate his skin. His triumph, however, was the defeat of Bakasura, who "consumed a cart load of food at a sitting and used palmyra trees for toothbrushes."

How the Condor Is Caught.

Many birds cannot fly straight up. They must rise at a very gentle incline. They must get onward motion before their wings can get full effect of the air. It is said that the mode of taking the condor is to build a pen, say, forty or fifty feet in diameter and six feet high and put a carcass in the middle of it. The condor alights, but cannot again rise at an angle which will take him over the fence. Many heavy bodied, short winged ducks rise from the water at so small an angle that they must use both feet and wings for thirty or forty feet in order to get onward motion enough to give effectiveness to their wings by coming in contact with larger masses of still air.

Oxford Examinations.

When John Scott, the future Lord Chancellor Eldon, took his B. A. at Oxford in 1770 he was examined in Hebrew and in history. His own pen has recorded this noteworthy "exam." It consisted of two questions, one in each subject. The Hebrew question ran, "What's the Hebrew for 'place of a skull?'"—the history, "Who founded the University of Oxford?" The candidate, of course, replied, "Golgotha" and "Alfred the Great," though he had his misgivings touching the truth of the second answer, a fiction which has since been scattered to the winds by those two highly distinguished Oxonians, Professor Freeman and J. R. Green.

The Gallows Plant.

During the middle ages the botanists, or old "herbalists," gave currency to many curious stories concerning the growth, form, etc., of mandrake or May apple, which finally resulted in its being given the name of "gallows plant." The pseudo scientists of that time declared that mandrake would grow in no other place except upon which some terrible crime had been committed. The roots were formerly supposed to bear a strong resemblance to the human form.

Mind Reading.

"Perhaps smoking is offensive to you, Miss Smith?"

"On the contrary, I like the smell of a good cigar."

Without a moment's hesitation he threw away the weed he was smoking. Something in her manner rather than her words led him to suspect that she was a judge of cigars.—Chicago Tribune.

Time Had Passed.

"I always forget how times flies when I'm enjoying myself," said Mr. Staylate. "I hope you won't hesitate to tell me when it's time to go."

"Gracious!" replied Miss Patience. "It's too late now. You should have mentioned that several hours ago."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

No Further Delay.

Abner Slopoak (desperately)—M-may I name the day? Jemima Jones (decisively)—No! Abner Slopoak (in alarm)—Why? Jemima Jones (frankly)—Because, if you put it off as long you did your proposal, we never will be married. I'll name the day myself!—Cleveland Leader.

Raw Animals.

With a heart attuned to "nature study" a little Hungarian girl in the Canadian northwest exclaimed: "Yah, teacher. It's certain beautiful on our prairie, where the birds and the small sheep run about raw."

Decision of character will often give an inferior mind command over a superior.—Wirt.

Excursions to the East at Half Fare

During the coming summer months rare opportunity will be given to visit eastern cities at a minimum expense.

Tickets will be sold by the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad at practically half the regular rates, or one fare for the round trip from California points to Denver, Omaha, Kansas City, Memphis, St. Louis, Chicago and many other points. For a slight extra cost trip may be made via Portland with a free stop-over at the Lewis and Clarke Fair.

The world-famed scenery of the Denver & Rio Grande needs no introduction to most travelers. The Canon of the Grande, the Eagle River Canon, the Canon of the Arkansas, the Black Canon of the Gunnison, the Royal Gorge, and Pike's Peak, form but a part of that glorious panorama, all of which is viewed by daylight from the new observation cars with open tops—as one passenger said, "It is just like touring in an auto."

Through sleeping cars to all principal points east.

Mr. W. J. Shotwell, General Agt., D. & R. G. R. R. Co., 625 Market street, San Francisco, will, on application, quote lowest fares, arrange sleeping car accomodations and all details of your trip, and send you free some beautifully illustrated travel books. Write today.

A Judicious Inquiry.

A well known traveling man who visits the drug trade says he has often heard druggists inquire of customers who asked for a cough medicine, whether it was wanted for a child or for an adult, and if for a child they almost invariably recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. The reason for this is that they know that there is no danger from it and that it always cures. There is not the least danger in giving it, and for coughs, colds and croup it is unsurpassed. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Bird Elocution.

The blue jay is a great elocutionist and gives utterance to many unlocked for remarks, but the one most often heard in the woods relates to the possession of a "chee-iddley-enk." Just exactly what sort of creature or thing this is no one can tell, but whenever I am in the woods I hear the jays exclaim "Chee-tidley-enk—got him," to which the meadow lark in the pasture clearing replies, "Oh-so-cheap," with a most sarcastic drawl on the "so" and an inflection on the "cheap." As a rule, the meadow lark says his say while perched on a fence post, and he talks with his mouth wide open. There are a lot of little people in the thickets who are always in such a hurry and talk so fast that it is difficult to tell what they say. There is that gayly colored little fellow the red start, crying, "T-wet wee-whe-whe-whisett," and the dainty summer yellow bird, who has something to say in the same line and much in the same manner. What he wants is wheat, and, although he never eats it, his constant cry is, "Wheat, wheat, t'weat wheat, wheat, wheat."—Dan Beard in Recreation.

Some Seasonable Advice.

It may be a piece of superfluous advice to urge people at this season of the year to lay in a supply of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is almost sure to be needed before winter is over, and much more prompt and satisfactory results are obtained when taken as soon as a cold is contracted and before it has become settled in the system, which can only be done by keeping the remedy at hand. This remedy is so widely known and so altogether good that no one should hesitate about buying it in preference to any other. For sale by Shoults & Co.

The Kitchen in China.

"In China everything seems to us to go by contrary, and the front part of the house is devoted to the kitchen," says a missionary. "Upon entering the house at the front door one is introduced into the culinary department, and so important an adjunct to a household is the kitchen that the population of towns and cities throughout the empire is reckoned by the number of kitchens within the walls. Brick chimneys in China are a thing unheard of, and the smoke from the fire is allowed to roll lazily along the ceiling out into the court or through an aperture made in the roof. The kitchen fire is usually built in a mud stove, for any other kind of a stove is unheard of among the poor classes."—Chicago Chronicle.

How to Cure Corns and Bunions.

First, soak the corn or bunion in warm water to soften it; then pare it down as closely as possible without drawing blood and apply Chamberlain's Pain Balm twice daily, rubbing vigorously for five minutes at each application. A corn plaster should be worn a few days to protect it from the shoe. As a general liniment for sprains, bruises, lameness and rheumatism, Pain Balm is unequaled. It is for sale by Shoults & Co.

The Rajah's Guest.

It is the custom in Sarawak that the rajah's house shall be open to his subjects at any time. That same Kayan chief from Baram who visited me, Dian by name, presented himself one night at Astana when the rajah had a dinner party. His appearance, clad simply in a chawat (waistcoat), with five followers in equally full dress, among a dozen people conventionally attired was a piquant reminder that I was "east of Suez." Dian pulled a pipe—I was going to say from his pocket—lit up and bore his part gallantly in the social amenities of the evening.—London Express.

Cutting a Hailstorm.

During a severe hailstorm in the Himalayas our native gardener brought out a hatchet and placed it edge upward in the garden to "cut the storm," as he said. Catlin, in his "North American Indians," describes a ceremony of the Mandan Indians in which hatchets and edged tools are sacrificed to the "spirits of the waters" to avert a recurrence of the great deluge, of which the tribe has the tradition.—Notes and Queries.

She Might Wish.

"I have always allowed my wife to wish something for herself for every birthday since we have been married."

"What does she wish generally?"

"Well, the last fifteen times she has been wishing for a piano."

Saved His Life

J. W. Davenport, Wingo, Ky., writes June 14, 1902: "I want to tell you I believe Bailard's Snow Liniment saved my life. I was under the treatment of two doctors, and they told me one of my lungs was entirely gone, and the other badly affected. I also had a lump on my side. I don't think I could have lived over two months longer. I was induced by a friend to try Ballard's Snow Liniment. The first application gave me great relief; two fifty cent bottles cured me sound and well."

It is a wonderful medicine and I recommend it to suffering humanity. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Crockett and the Mules.

When Davy Crockett sat in the national legislature as a representative of the state of Texas he had many clashes with men of more education, but less wit, than himself. It is told of him that one day while standing in front of his hotel on Pennsylvania avenue a swarm of mules trotted by under the custody of an overseer from one of the stock farms in Virginia. A congressman from Boston, who was standing near by, attracted Crockett's attention to the unusual sight, saying:

"Hello there, Crockett. Here's a lot of your constituents on parade. Where are they going?"

The celebrated hunter looked at the animals with a quizzical glance, and then, turning to the other, said quietly, but with great emphasis, "They are going to Massachusetts to teach school."—Harper's Weekly.

Cures Chills and Fever

G. W. Wirt, Nacogdoches, Texas, says: "His daughter has chills and fever for three years; he could not find anything that would help her till he used Heroine. His wife will not keep house without it, and cannot say too much for it." 50c. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

The Best Doctor

Rev. B. C. Horton, Sulphur Springs, Tex., writes July 19, 1902: "I have used in my family Ballard's Snow Liniment and Horehound Syrup, and they have proved certainly satisfactory. The liniment is the best we have ever used for headache and pains. The cough syrup has been our doctor for the last eight years." Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Fools All the Doctors.

"There is a hale and hearty looking old chap walking about town," remarked a New York physician lately, "who for years has had a complication of diseases which make him most interesting to the profession. The ailments of which he shows undeniable symptoms are rarely seen in combination, and the state of his inner workings is a matter for speculation among the doctors who have examined him.

"The old fellow himself loves to tell that when he first asked medical advice some twenty years ago the physician, a famous practitioner in those days, wrote across the diagnosis he had put down on paper: 'This man cannot live thirty days. I should like to be present at the autopsy.' That great doctor has been dead these many years, and the dying patient still smiles cheerfully and seeks a cure for his malady. Queer, isn't it?"—New York Press.

Cures Winter Cough

J. E. Gover, 101 N. Main St., Ottawa, Kans., writes: "Every fall it has been my wife's trouble to catch a severe cold, and therefore to cough all winter long. Last fall I got her a bottle of Horehound Syrup. She used it and has been able to sleep soundly all night long. Whenever the cough troubles her, two or three doses stop the cough, and she is able to be up and well." 25c, 50c and $1.00. Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Could Not Be Better.

The uniform success of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy has won for it a wide reputation and many people throughout the country will agree with Mr. Chas. W. Mattison, of Milford, Va., who says: "It works like magic, and is the best preparation I know of. It couldn't be any better." He had a serious attack of dysentery and was advised to try a bottle of this remedy, which he did, with the result that immediate relief was obtained. For sale by Shoults & Co.

Unusual Appreciation

ANOTHER jewel has been added to the crown of the metropolis of the Pacific Coast by one of her leading business men, Harper A. Smith. Mr. Smith is the head of the greatest enterprise of its kind in the West and recently came forward with the announcement that in appreciation of the patronage that had made his success possible he would hereafter share his profits with all who cared to become his partners.

Mr. Smith has in 25 years built up the largest mail order store this side of the Rockies. In addition to an enormous transient trade, the great six-story store at 25 Market Street, San Francisco, last year supplied on mail orders more than twelve thousand families as regular customers. Knowing that through co-operation greater things were possible, Mr. Smith formed a stock company known as "Smith's Cash Store Inc." and now offers all those who desire it a share in the business for $50.00. That amount buys five shares of stock of a par value of $10 each, guaranteed to bear interest at a minimum rate of six per cent per annum. The holder of stock may purchase all of his household supplies from the great cash store at a discount of five percent on the already remarkable Smith prices AS AN ADDED benefit.

It is not to be supposed that interested persons are limited to a $50.00 investment. Those who desire to do so may invest more and be assured that the income will be unusually large on the stock purchased. Mr. Smith as president and general manager of the great corporation has seen to it that the concern is purely mutual. Six per cent a year is simply the minimum interest rate which the stock will pay as has already been intimated. The articles of incorporation provide for an equable division of the net profits among the stockholders. To date the profits of the business and the trade discounts have made possible payments that at times were at the rate of thirty per cent a year on investment. Mr. Smith will see and talk with any who may be prepared to make a small investment from which quick returns are desired. The Cash Store is one of lower Market street's conspicuous buildings, and those visiting San Francisco will have no difficulty in locating it.
